Busts are less likely, since you can theoretically end up with a hand of as many as 10 twos, for example, without busting – which is definitely not possible with a single or even a double deck game! However, this actually helps the dealer more than it does you, since he is forced to hit more often. Another disadvantage is that you will reach blackjack, with its 3:2 payoff, less frequently. And of course, the house has a higher edge with multi deck play than single or double deck, although they may take measures to even the odds.
