The history of Malaysian gambling market dates back to the 19th century. It appeared as a result of close trade relations with China, as these were Chinese traders who first introduced gambling to Malaysia residents. Being under the British colonial invasion resulted in the introduction of horse racing. The gambling was becoming more and more popular among Malays, so in 1969 the Malaysia prime minister received an official request from the leader of Genting Group, a Malaysia conglomerate, to approve the issuing of a license for the first Malaysian casino. Upon the acceptance of the request, Casino de Genting officially opened its doors in 1971. This was the first and the last Malaysia gambling entity, which was licensed by the government.
