Additionally, while the system isn't likely to bring in a large win, it is enjoyable as long as the gambler isn't betting more than he or she can afford to lose. It's also advisable to stick with a flat bet as opposed to progressive betting; in the long run less money will be at risk and possible loss. Another suggestion is that the player tries out the system for free online. According to a report in The Age, former VFA footballer and current Greens gambling spokesman Richard Di Natale has said that the Greens may try to bring up the issue as part of the current look at reforming the Interactive Gambling Act. The problem, he said, is that smaller leagues have few resources to combat the possibility of match fixing or insider betting.
