After the news of Echo Entertainment winning the bid for the new casino in Queens Wharf, Brisbane, we are glad to announce that they will be installing 868 poker machines before opening. They have also been given the green light to include 2500 Pokie machines in the casino. However, they are not too sure if they will all fit in the facility as the original plans did not make space for that, they are however reviewing these plans to determine how they can make them all fit. What this means is that they won't necessarily use all machines, but over the years they will look at expanding. Joe Fortune casino is backed by Real Time Gaming (RTG) and Rival. That said, there are some good signs for the future of the bill. There is plenty of support for the proposals, ranging from the gaming industry in Australia to a wide cross-section of political figures. Even some of the more pragmatic opponents of gambling have supported similar proposals in the past, due in large part to the fact that Australian-licensed online poker and gambling sites would be easier to hold accountable than foreign sites. When it comes to trends on Google, there are a number of interesting results over the past 12 months. For the search query for 'online gambling' it's no surprise to see that the country with the highest search interest is Malta. As one of the largest iGaming hubs in the world, it is easy to see why Malta tops the list. However, some interesting additions include St. Helena, which is in second place in regards to search interest. This is extremely intriguing, as this tiny island hosts very limited forms of gambling. It is one of the most isolated regions in the world, and has a population of fewer than 5,000 people. Other key countries on this list include South Africa, Singapore, Australia, United States, New Zealand, United Kingdom, Philippines, and Canada.
