No, you didn't. The bookmakers are just that good. Nobody has more information about the teams than the bookies. They know more about injuries. They hear gossip from the locker rooms. The bookmakers not only have an insider's knowledge, but they have complicated formulas to account for most contingencies in the games. As close as one can have a game to a science, they do. The odds are meant to be close to the final results. So when you think you have a big advantage and the game's closer than you think, you didn't get unlucky. The bookie is just that good. Along a similar tack, Steinfest is a gaming machine which pays homage to the German annual festival known as Oktoberfest.
